The Streatham fireworks display is one of three massive Bonfire Night events being staged by Lambeth Council this year. Visit Streatham Common for huge firework fun this November 2009.

Firework fun on Streatham Common

Streatham Common will be centre stage to one of the best displays in South London, promising something special for old and young alike. Previous years' events have seen crowds of Londoners turn up to enjoy the fun and the 2009 event promises to be no exception.

Fireworks galore

Expect a seriously impressive display of fireworks in November with plenty in store for firework enthusiasts. The skies of Streatham Common will be filled with the sights and sounds of a dazzling display, guaranteed to be something special for 2009.

Family fun in London

Kids and adults will be out to enjoy the Streatham fireworks display, coming together under the glow of pyrotechnics in traditional community spirit. The event is completely free to attend, leaving every reason to make a day of it in the heart of Streatham.

Historic celebrations

The Gunpowder Plot celebrates its 404th anniversary this year and London fireworks displays are set to be bigger than ever. Celebrate an historic London occasion in traditional style and make it a Guy Fawkes night to remember.

Streatham fireworks display takes place on Streatham Common on Thursday 5th November 2009, with the display starting at 7.30pm promptly. Admission is free.
